

ABSTRACT

A sports shoe includes a sole on which a shell divided into a heel unit and a separate toe unit is associated. The heel unit and the toe unit are mutually associated so 5 that they can slide along a substantially longitudinal axis and include an adjustment device for increasing the overall volume of the sports shoe by means of a forward movement of the toe unit.